

CALL FOR PAPERS

RACE & JUSTICE

Special Issue: Anti-Asian Racism & Violence

Guest Editors:

Hyeyoung Lim, Ph.D., University of Alabama at Birmingham

Claire S. Lee, Ph.D., University of Massachusetts at Lowell

Chunrye Kim, Ph.D., Saint Joseph's University

Anti-Asian Racism and Violence around the world are not new but are on the surge during the COVID-19 pandemic. Although the crimes against Asians have received a considerable amount of media attention recently, we do not know to what extent and how anti-Asian racism and violence occur due to the limited amount of existing literature. To fulfill the gap, the Korean Society of Criminology in America (KoSCA) calls for papers to address the current global issue in anti-Asian racism and violence.

Potential topics to be considered are:

- Anti-Asian crime and violence during the pandemic
- Comparative, cross-national, or global studies of anti-Asian racism and violence
- Cybercrime and cyberviolence against Asians
- Empirical work examining theoretical perspectives on anti-Asian racism/discrimination
- Evaluation research on hate crime prevention programs, policies, or procedures
- Institutional anti-Asian racism
- Police, judicial, or correctional efforts to prevent anti-Asian crimes
- Prevention and intervention studies on anti-Asian racism and violence
- Racial/ethnic discrimination in criminal justice system
- Rigorous systematic reviews on anti-Asian crime and violence
- Workplace/School violence against Asians

* The term, Asian, represents diverse communities across the world, including but not limited to Asian immigrant populations and Asian descendant population.

A one-page abstract should be submitted electronically to raj.abstracts@gmail.com by August 31, 2021.

The abstract should contain details of the conceptual and methodological frameworks adopted for the study. Authors of selected abstracts will be notified by September 30, 2021. Final manuscripts are due no later than April 31, 2022. Authors should follow all formatting guidelines regular manuscript submission to the journal (see the instructions for authors). We anticipate this special issue will be published in October 2022. Questions about the appropriateness of topics should be directed to Dr. Hyeyoung Lim at hyeyoung@uab.edu.

All papers must be submitted online to ScholarOne Manuscripts <https://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/raj>. Mention in the cover letter that the paper should be considered for the “Special Issue – Anti-Asian Racism & Violence.”

Race and Justice: An International Journal serves as a quarterly forum for excellent scholarship on race, ethnicity, and the justice system. The journal prioritizes rigorous empirical studies that use quantitative, qualitative, or mixed methods. RAJ's scope includes policy examinations, theory tests, program evaluations, and other types of studies that speak directly to policy, practice, or theory and advance the scholarly literature in one or more substantive areas. More information about the journal can be found at <https://journals.sagepub.com/home/raj>.